ABOUT FACULTY DEVELOPMENT PROGRAMME

Recent coronavirus pandemic (COVID-19) has posed very serious challenges to the entire world including severe health and benevolent challenges. The Government of India has been responding actively to break the chain regarding spread of virus and different states and organizations are responding to the situation at their level best to lesser the loss and have been putting up efforts to follow damage control strategies. The challenge before Academic institutions is to continue with teaching-learning process as effectively as one-to-one interaction in the class room confined system of knowledge delivery. Academic institutions are discovering that the situation is fundamentally different from the more traditional mode of teaching and learning process. At this backdrop, Chaudhary Ranbir Singh University has put a mile stone towards enabling teachers of the University to use digital methods for effective, productive and innovative teaching methodology in an efficient way. It is a step forward towards implementation of a skill-set to deal with existing lock-down and post lock-down period as well. The faculty development programme on 'Digital Initiatives for Technology Enabled Teaching Learning' plans to address to allow the academic leaders and rethink on their teaching methodology and content, with a more focused approach to adopt digital technology to meet the demand of such situations.
